Seeking Association Information Editor

This position requires an interest in your community and basic word processing and e-mail computer skills. Our retiring editor, Lois Palermo, tells us how much she has enjoyed learning about the community and meeting people through her work as editor since 2007. This is an important way to give back to Stoneybrook and yet have it only take one or two hours a month of your time. If you are a newer resident and have a future interest in participating in the business of the association, this is a great way to get your feet wet without a huge commitment and to get to know your neighborhood at the same time.

Association Information began in 2007 as homeowners took over the governance of SVOA as a way for the Board to communicate with owners and residents in a less formal fashion than Board minutes. The Communications Committee took on the responsibility of publishing it. While it has been published monthly in recent years, it was originally meant to be published on an “as needed” basis and going forward it may be published only periodically-

The involvement of our residents on the Board and the committees is a great strength of our community. You are encouraged to volunteer to do committee work. And, at this time, we ask that you consider being the AI Editor. Contact Susan Hayes, Communications Committee Chair, at 541-752-0498 to learn more and find out if this is something that might be for you.

Show and Tell Night

We thank the Activity Committee for arranging this wonderful evening of sharing and learning. It was great to have so many participate and to see and hear about their talents and interests. It was fun to visit with neighbors who just came and enjoyed.

Stoneybrook Village 2014 Directories

The directories are here and are being delivered personally to each residence. Check the inside-cover for information regarding how to contact WCM, our community manager, or to find out who to contact regarding activities in which you may wish to participate. Thanks to the Communications Committee for producing this valuable community resource.
